

Dear Summit Participants:

Welcome to the 2022 Global Summit of Women in Bangkok, Thailand!

It brings me great joy to finally gather women leaders worldwide this week in beautiful Bangkok after being postponed twice due to COVID. For the past 32 years, the Summit has served as a welcoming place for many of you to return to each year, to re-energize your zeal for improving your business, your career, your community and beyond. I look forward to reconnecting with Summit “veterans” as well as to meet first-time participants alike.

I thank you for your efforts to be a part of the 2022 Summit despite an ongoing pandemic and an unresolved geopolitical conflict. You are 600 delegates strong from 51 countries, who are continuing the formation of a truly unique global web of women committed to improving women’s economic lives. The 2022 theme – Women: Creating Opportunities in the New Reality – underscores the innovative ways women are moving forward following the dramatic changes in the workplace and throughout society emerging during this pandemic. Over the next 3 days, we will share what we have learned and listen to others present strategies and ideas to us that we can bring back to our respective countries.

As always, you can expect the Summit to focus on creative solutions, whether from government or business or civil society to advance women's economic progress globally. It is my hope that you will leave Thailand inspired to continue working for positive change.

Thank you to “Amazing” Thailand for opening its doors to the Summit. We have been trying for three years to make it here and I am so glad we did. A special thanks goes to Thailand’s Host Committee, especially to its Chair, Kobkarn Wattanavrangkul and Vice Chair Chonchanok Viravan. Their tireless efforts have helped to make this Summit a huge success. I am sure you will see their warm hospitality throughout the event.

Thank you again, and I look forward to seeing you again at many more Summits.

Irene Natividad
Summit President

2022 Global Summit of Women - Program

Dear Friends of Thailand,

Finally you are all here at the City of Angel (the meaning of Bangkok) in the Land of Smiles (the signature of Thailand). It has been a tough 3 years since the day we were approached by Irene that Thailand would be the next host country of GSW. Through many uncertainties of the world, the Thai Host Committee is joining hands with GSW International to make GSW 2022 @ Bangkok hopefully one of the most empowering and memorable Summits worth the wait in time.

The Thai Host Committee has put all its energy for GSW 2022 @ Bangkok. We are ready to present you a New Chapter of Amazing Thailand. At the end, we want you to go back with a new dawn of Hope, a new faith in the Future, a new look of ASEAN, a new understanding of Thai Women and a new confidence in Thailand. Thailand is a Land of Friendship, a Land of Opportunities, a Land of Peace, a Land of Creativity, a Land of New Reality.

We also want you to see that Thailand is a country concerned with environmental sustainability and the Host Committee is especially proud to have helped to made "Carbon Neutrality" possible for the Summit. The wheat straw water tumbler for drinking, the upcycling bag from 11 plastic bottles, the recycled paper backdrops or even recycled paper table decorations, the recycled paper program books and all printings, the low food mileages menu, the room temperature, all the venues that we use, the low carbon transportation and many more details of recycle and reuse actions of this Summit are our implementations to lower the carbon emission. The remaining carbon we release will be offset by Carbon Credit of a Thai company and audited by an international institution.

Last but not least Just remember to be the best ambassador of Thailand to tell the world "Thailand is more amazing with our New Chapter".

Love you all...Friendship for Life!

Kobkarn Wattanavrangkul

The second largest economy in Southeast Asia and the eight largest in the entire Asia Pacific region, Thailand is known as a major touristic destination, but it actually has an industrialized economy with 60% of its GDP produced by exports. The number one exporter of rice and seafood products globally, it is also the largest exporter in ASEAN of electronics and electrical equipment, computers and computer equipment, automobile production and sales. Its third largest export globally – gems! There’s more to know about this vibrant economy described by the World Bank as “one of the great development success stories,” a country open to investments, with a hardworking workforce as well as a welcoming citizenry.

10:15 a.m. – 11:30 a.m. Male CEO Forum – Managing During Uncertainties

Convention Center A1

An ongoing war and ever-mutating global virus have upended global economies while showing at the same time how interconnected and interdependent are the citizens of the world. The most visible signs are supply chains curtailed by lockdowns, conflict and worker shortages in many countries interrupting the flow of goods globally from oil/gas to wheat to computer chips. This external market reality is coupled by internal organizational changes emerging from the pandemic that corporate CEOs must also deal with -- a period of reckoning over what employers owe their workers in terms of overall 'care' during a difficult time, as well as a reckoning among employees globally as to their priorities in life given their encounter with a virus that has changed the world they knew before. Women, in particular were disproportionately impacted by COVID resulting in the loss of 45 million jobs held by them and the collapse of 20% of women-owned enterprises worldwide. How can companies maintain their commitment to gender diversity at a challenging time when their attention and resources are pulled in so many directions?

BREAKOUT SESSIONS

2:30 p.m. – 4:00 p.m. Moving the Needle on Women-on-Boards: Does Advocacy
Convention Center A1 Make a Difference

For some time now, countries wanting to speed up women's access to corporate board seats have adopted a variety of methods – through mandated quotas, insertion of gender diversity into corporate governance codes, and shareholder-driven initiatives. Behind all of these efforts are numerous women's business advocacy groups that have been pressing for such changes for decades. While some of these policies and programs have moved the needle in a growing group of countries, the majority still have male-dominated company boards despite the growth of women in corporate leadership roles and women entrepreneurs creating sizeable businesses, providing a ready pool for such positions. So whose responsibility is it to increase women's representation in corporate board rooms – government? The private sector? Women themselves? What happens to companies that do not change?

Lotus 5-7

Women-owned businesses suffered greatly during the pandemic with 20% of SMEs globally no longer viable. Those enterprises that did survive were able to pivot to ecommerce. Going forward, however, the businesses that will grow further are those that engage in cross border sales and marketing. This session provides on-line tools and advice from Google, Amazon and Sea Inc. Country Managers that will be helpful in transitioning SMEs by expanding their reach in domestic markets or by accessing markets outside their borders.

BREAKOUT SESSIONS

4:15 pm – 5:45 p.m. Effective Virtual Presentations Lotus 5-7

This pandemic changed how we communicate in the 'workplace', which could be one's dining table, bedroom or den, via platforms like Zoom, Teams or Google Meet that enabled many of us formerly office-bound to do remote work. Even as offices open up, this mode of communicating is here to stay, but virtual meetings and conferences, however, require us all to develop new skills. Giving a speech from a podium is different from giving one through a screen; the same goes for presentations at virtual meetings with colleagues. This session looks at the 'logistics' of effective virtual communications, tips for communicating effectively given shorter attention spans, and how to engage audiences or your peers across a screen. Above all, how can we convey professionalism and credibility through your computer camera?

4:15 p.m. – 5:45 p.m. Youth Forum Convention Center A1

This special forum showcases young successful entrepreneurs who have created businesses, most technology-based, to address market needs in which they saw an opening for a new enterprise. Spanning food production, more effective farming, retail stock investments and commercial real estate, these four amazing business creators will not only share what they developed but also the lessons learned along the way. That entrepreneurship is another route to economic empowerment is clearly exemplified by the presenters in this session.

Social Media and Impact on the News

To find out the latest news, most people no longer hold up a newspaper, but instead turn to their smartphones to find out what's going on in the world. Unfortunately, they don't necessarily log on to established media outlets. Many will admit that they depend on social media for their news 'fix', which often contain opinions as opposed to objective coverage of an event. So, do influencers bear responsibility for ensuring that what they convey to their followers are in fact 'the truth'? And how can journalists break through this noise to get across what really happened? How can they use social media, in turn, to their advantage?

PLENARY SESSIONS

9:00 a.m. – 10:15 a.m. Women CEO Forum: How ESG Informs Business Strategy
Convention Center A1

During COVID, there has been an accelerated response from companies to ramp up their environmental, social and governance initiatives. There is an increasing move away from a purely classical emphasis on simply bottom line success to a company's value being assessed on how well it has performed on ESG metrics. Investors, millennials and regulators are an ever-growing voice for companies' to be responsive to forward looking issues that consumers have now embraced, and are consequently a win-win for all stakeholders. Even if not required to do so, companies are now including in their annual reports their activities in the ESG arena. A stellar group of CEOs will share their own companies' approach to incorporating ESG as part of their strategy for growth.

10:15 a.m. – 11:30 a.m. Understanding the Virtual Financial Mainstream:
Convention Center A1 Cryptocurrency, NFTs, Metaverse, eSports

The virtual world has created its own financial instruments and platforms, which have been adopted globally, upending the traditional financial global market. Whether new to these instruments or already investors, women in business need to know as much as they can about the common forms of crypto – bitcoin and ethereum. How do they work? What's 'behind' them? On what are their values based? How does one 'transact' with them? Are they speculative vehicles only or can they be real investments? The same questions arise with NFTs – Nonfungible Tokens – virtual collections have made fortunes for some while burning others. As for Metaverse that's already here, what are its possible uses for work beyond its current use in eSports, that's gaining ground among women during the pandemic.

BREAKOUT SESSIONS

2:30 p.m. – 4:00 p.m. How Well-Being is Key to Business Success
Convention Center A1

During the pandemic, employee and workers' well-being' became a key topic

2022 Global Summit of Women - Program

among companies' Human Resource and Diversity Officers. What comprises 'well-being' has now expanded and companies have responded by widening their portfolio of benefits to include mental health, child care, clearer definitions of workplace gender relations, more flexibility in scheduling, more 'inclusion' initiatives -- in other words, a more holistic look at employee 'care' than in the past. Of course, many countries are facing recruitment and retention issues in this period so a focus on 'well-being' is considered a game changer. This session looks at well-being from an organizational, personal and environmental lens and how it can be attained.

2:30 p.m. – 4:00 p.m. Protecting Your Business in the Digital Economy Lotus 5-7

Most SMEs are now active in ecommerce even if they have a brick-and-mortar presence, because of the tremendous growth of on-line sales during this ongoing pandemic. While Internet platforms have enabled enterprises of all sizes to grow beyond their regular customer base and to weather downturns due to COVID, they have also exposed these businesses to outside threats they never envisioned. What should entrepreneurs put in place to protect their brand, their intellectual properties, their databases, workers and clients from outside intrusion and appropriation of any aspect of their business? If engaged in cross-border trade -- for which exposure has become wider -- what safeguards are available? A distinguished group of digital experts will provide practical advice on how SMEs and other institutions can protect the content of their businesses.

BREAKOUT SESSIONS

4:15 p.m. – 5:45 p.m. Managing the Multi-Generational Workforce

Lotus 5-7

All workplaces now have varying age groups comprising their workforce – long-term ‘baby boomers’ characterized by their stability, expertise, work ethic; Gen Xers now in their early managerial positions; Millennials – the largest cohort – noted for their desire for autonomy, flexibility and equality; and Gen Z just now entering their first jobs. If managing diverse generations was difficult pre-pandemic, it has become more so now when the workplace has been redefined to include home, office and a blend of the two. Hear from executives in three different industries – technology, financial services and travel/leisure – as to strategies they have developed to retain, grow and promote workers from different generations.
